NEWSLETTER NO. 10 OCTOBER 2021

I have found this on Facebook

It is SO TRUE

If you practice, you get better.

If you get better, you play with better players.

If you play with better players, you play better music.

If you play better music, you have more fun.

If you have more fun, you want to practice more.

> If you practice more, You get better...

The Fascinating Tradition of Giving Flowers

The article is taken from the Internet

While giving flowers is a common occurrence, the reasons vary in different countries.

Flower Gifting Around the World

For hundreds of years, giving flowers have been a social means of communication. In the United States, flowers are often given during rites of passage, for commemorating special occasions or as a heartfelt gift between loved ones and friends. Flower gifting also occurs in most countries around the world. However, the meanings and traditions often vary.

Asian Customs. While students traditionally gave their favorite teacher an apple in past years, in China, teachers are given flowers. Peonies are by far the flower most often given in China. They are also quite popularly used for weddings. Strangely, potted plants are not considered a pleasant gift among Asian cultures. The people believe that like a plant confined by a pot, the gift symbolizes a binding or restriction.

In Russia, in lieu of giving birthday presents, the guest of honor receives a single flower or an unwrapped bouquet. Floral arrangements or baskets are not given. Russians celebrate a holiday known as Woman's Day. Traditional gifts include red roses, hyacinths or tulips. When there is a funeral or other occasion where someone wishes to express sympathy, carnations, lilies or roses are given in circular configurations, which signify the transition of birth, life and death to rebirth. In this instance the color of choice is commonly yellow. For joyous occasions, arrangements and bouquets generally contain an odd number of flowers.

Tradition of Giving
Flowers

European Traditions

In the times of ancient Rome, brides carried flowers to scare away evil spirits and encourage fertility. The Dutch believed that flowers were food for the soul. When invited to someone's home in Great Britain, it is tradition to bring a gift of flowers. All types are acceptable except white lilies, which are usually seen at funerals. Not unlike the United States, red roses are a symbol of love. Flowers are generally gifted in odd numbered increments regardless of the occasion. However, the Brits also have superstitions regarding the number 13, so the number is avoided.

African Rituals

In the southern region of the continent, flowers are traditionally given during Christmas. Egyptians are much more conservative and restrict flower gifting to funerals and weddings. While certain flowers may have significant meanings for some, across the United States flowers are an accepted gift for any reason desired.

Flowers for the 1st of September? One More Occasion for Flowergiving in Russia.

and taken from the Internet

September the 1st is back-to-school day in Russia.

It is the official day of the beginning of an academic year for schools and universities across Russia and other countries of the former Soviet Union. The first day of school, also known as "The Day of Knowledge", is an official celebration in Russia; and as with any celebration, there are certain traditions associated with it. Flower-giving to teachers is one of them. Although it is difficult for people from other cultures to understand, the 1st day of school in Russia is deeply associated with flowers. It is thought to be the third biggest selling period for local florists.

All over the country dressed-up children walk to their school with the bouquet of flowers for their teachers. This day carries great significance for the first graders, for whom a very special ceremony is organized called the "The First Bell". Hundreds of students stand around waiting for their first bell, all with bouquets of flowers and a mixture of excitement and agitation.

September? | FlowersUSSR

This tradition has been around since the 80s and is something their parents used to do, older siblings did and now it is the younger children's turn. What changed, however, is the type of bouquets that children bring to their teachers these days. It used to be dahlias and gladioluses from the garden (the family's own garden or friends' or even neighbors' garden). Those flowers were in season and that's what most students used to bring to school on the 1st of September. These days, more and more families buy bouquets from florists that make arrangements with sunflowers, roses, hydrangeas, carnations, orchids and other variety of flowers. Often the bouquets are decorated with some elements of school life; for example, rulers, pencils, erasers, etc.
