Let's do it!

A Teacher Appreciation Day is in May. Why do we need to wait that long???

All of our teachers are unique, are passionate about music and teaching, and very knowledgeable. Let's show appreciation to the teachers of the Conservatory by bringing flowers every time students perform.

A BEAUTY OF AN INSTRUMENT

COMPOSER'S "FACE"

TO BE CONTINUED

L. v. Beethoven (1770-1827) used all the instruments available to him and many piano makers sought out his approval. He readily utilized the changes made to the instrument. When new notes were added, he began including them in his sonatas. This required the public who wanted to play his works as he intended to buy the new instruments. Beethoven owned and used five or six different pianos regularly, although he probably tried many others. Of these, three pianos still exist and are displayed in museums: an Érard in Linz, Austria; a Broadwood in Budapest, Hungary; and a Graf at the Beethoven museum in Bonn, Germany (for which there is currently a campaign to fund a restoration of the instrument).
